Photos force bombing suspects' move

Experts evaluate the strategy behind releasing their images to the public.

BOSSIE — Photos showing the faces of two earlier bombing suspects have been released by the FBI to aid in the investigation of the recent bombing. The images were taken after tips from viewers came in, leading to the discovery of the suspects' identities.

It marked the first time in history that the FBI has released the images of bombing suspects. The move was made to ensure that the public could see the faces of the suspects, who were identified as John Doe and Jane Doe.

The FBI said that releasing the images was a necessary step to ensure public safety and to help identify potential witnesses. The images were made available on the FBI's website.

"We are grave and we are making this decision," said FBI Chief Carroll. "We believe that the only way to prevent another bombing is to release the images of the suspects."
