The University of Oregon Symphony Orchestra presents “The Inspired Artist”

This concert takes you on a journey through some of an artist's most inspiring muses. Antonín Dvořák celebrates life with his effervescent “Carnival” Overture, young composer Chris Rogerson explores nature with his new work “Oaken Sky” and Pytor Ilyich Tchaikovsky tackles the inner struggles of man with his majestic and transformative Fifth Symphony. This concert also features the premier of new UO Symphony Orchestra conductor and Director of Orchestral Studies, Dr. David Jacobs.

Program

Carnival Overture    Antonín Dvořák (1841-1904)

The plywood paneling on the lower walls of Beall Hall is temporary. It is part of ongoing testing to improve the acoustics for larger ensembles. The panels were added on the recommendation of professional acousticians who are helping the staff in their ongoing attempts to improve the experience of our audience.

Dr. Jacobs began his musical career as a professional trumpet player after receiving his Bachelor of Music degree in trumpet performance from Duquesne University in 2000 studying with George Vosburgh. For the next seven seasons, he played regularly with the Sarasota Orchestra performing in masterworks, pops, and chamber music series, as well as the renown Sarasota Music Festival Orchestra. He also was a member of the Sarasota Opera Orchestra for three years and appeared several times with the Southwest Florida Symphony, Naples Philharmonic, and New World Symphony.

In 2007, he began training as a conductor at the world-renowned Eastman School of Music in Rochester, NY. While attending Eastman, he was the recipient of several conducting prizes including the prestigious Frederick Fennell Fellowship for Advanced Conducting Study and the 2009 Walter Hagen prize for excellence in conducting. Throughout his residency, he served as the Assistant Conductor of the Eastman Wind Ensemble and also jugged concerts between the Eastman Wind Orchestra, Eastman School Symphony Orchestra, Graduate Conducting Orchestra, New Eastman Orchestra, and Ossia, the school's student run contemporary sinfonietta.

Currently, Dr. Jacobs is the Director of Orchestral Studies at the University of Oregon where he conducts the symphony orchestra and teaches courses in conducting. Prior to that appointment, he was the Music Director of the PBA Symphony at Palm Beach Atlantic University, where he brought that orchestra to a heightened level of notoriety throughout the South Florida classical community. In addition to his posts with academic orchestras, Dr. Jacobs has also conducted several professional orchestras, here and abroad. In 2011, he earned one of seven coveted conducting fellowships at the Cabrillo New Music Festival where he worked with Marin Alsop. He also conducted the Richmond (VA) Symphony in workshop working with Joann Falleta and Gustav Meier. In 2010, he made his debut performance with the Palm Beach Symphony, sharing the podium with renowned conductor and concert pianist, Philippe Entremont, and conducted Tchaikovsky’s Symphony #5 with the St. Petersburg (Russia) State Symphony. In 2009, he was featured on local television conducting Beethoven in an open rehearsal with the Rochester Philharmonic during their annual Summer Conducting.

Despite his young age, Dr. Jacobs has already been credited on three commercially available albums. He served as Assistant Conductor for “Manhattan Music,” a collaboration between the Canadian Brass and the Eastman Wind Ensemble, which was released in 2008 on the Opening Day label; Conductor for “Let Others Name You,” an eclectic fusion of contemporary orchestral music with Balinese Gamelan performed by the Ossia Chamber Orchestra on the New World Record label, released in the Fall of 2009; and music director of brass and trumpet performer on “We Proclaim,” a collection of worship music released by the Ekklesia label in 2011.
