LA PROCESIÓN DEL ROCÍO

Joaquin Turina was born in Seville, Spain, on December 9, 1882—a year that also saw the births of notable artists Béla Bartók, Percy Grainger, Pablo Picasso, Igor Stravinsky, and Anton von Webern. Turina began his musical studies in Madrid with José Trangó, who also taught his friend Manuel de Falla, before moving to Paris in 1905 to study with Vincent d’Indy. He benefitted from d’Indy’s demanding training and remained in Paris until 1914. Turina was a marvelous pianist and an excellent conductor who was Diaghilev’s choice to lead the orchestra when the Ballets Russes performed in Spain in 1918. He also wrote a two-volume musical encyclopedia and, after his appointment as a distinguished professor of composition at the Conservatory of Madrid in 1931, a two-volume treatise on composition.

The tone poem La procesión del Rocío was first performed on March 30, 1913, in Madrid and repeatedly thereafter in Paris. Although a single movement, the work is divided into two distinct sections labeled Triana en fiestas (“Triana in festival”) and La procesión. The opening section depicts the various religious and popular celebrations that precede the annual procession in honor of the Virgen del Rocío (“Virgin of the Dew”). The pilgrimage is held annually during the Pentecost, beginning in Seville (Triana is the “Gypsy” neighborhood within the city) and ending at the coastal town of Rocío. Over the course of six days, thousands of pilgrims make their way over fifty miles of fields to the sea. These pilgrims, seated in elaborate farming carts or walking, escort the statue of the Virgin of the Dew to Rocío in the annual ritual but return to their festive ways in celebration of their arrival at the sea. In the evening, campfires are lit and music fills the air. Flamenco dancing is integral to the celebration. Turina’s composition conveys the religiosity of Daphnis et Chloé is a ballet with music by Maurice Ravel. Ravel described it as a "symphonie choréographique" (choreographic symphony). The scenario was adapted by Michel Fokine from an eponymous romance by the Greek writer Longus thought to date from around the 2nd century AD. Scott Goddard published a contemporary commentary that discussed the changes to the story that Fokine made to prepare a workable ballet scenario. The story concerns the love between the goatherd Daphnis and the shepherdess Chloë. The ballet is in one act and three scenes.

Ravel began work on the score in 1909 after a commission from Sergei Diaghilev. It was premiered at the Théâtre du Châtelet in Paris by his Ballets Russes on June 8, 1912. The orchestra was conducted by Pierre Monteux, the choreography was by Michel Fokine, and Vaslav Nijinsky and Tamara Karsavina danced the parts of Daphnis and Chloë. Léon Bakst designed the original sets.

At almost an hour long, Daphnis et Chloé is Ravel’s longest work. In spite of the ballet’s time length, a small number of musical leitmotifs give musical unity to the score. The music, some of the composer’s most passionate, is widely regarded as some of Ravel’s best, with extraordinarily lush harmonies typical of the impressionist movement in music. Even during the composer’s lifetime, contemporary commentators described this ballet as his masterpiece for orchestra. He extracted music from the ballet to make two orchestral suites, which can be performed with or without the chorus. The second of the suites, which includes much of the last part of the ballet and concludes with the “Danse générale”, is particularly popular. When the complete work is itself performed live, it is more often in concerts than in staged productions.

O MAGNUM MYSTERIUM

Morten Lauridsen is most noted for his vocal cycles and his a cappella motets, both of which are regularly performed by distinguished ensembles and vocal artists throughout the world. Lauridsen is the recipient of many honors and awards, including the 2007 National Medal of Arts. O magnum mysterium has become one of the world’s most performed choral compositions, and the composer felt so strongly about the musical content of the piece that he created a version for brass ensemble shortly after the work premiered in 1994. The version for band was prepared with the composer’s support and appreciation by University of Michigan Director of Bands Emeritus, H. Robert Reynolds.

The composer offers the following insights into his setting:

For centuries, composers have been inspired by the beautiful O magnum mysterium text with its depictions of the birth of the new-born King amongst the lowly animals and shepherds. This affirmation of God’s grace to the meek and adoration of the Blessed Virgin are celebrated in my setting through a quiet song of profound inner joy.

CONCERTO GROSSO

Fisher Tull was born in Waco, Texas in 1934. He received his musical training at North Texas State University. After he graduated in 1957 he went to Sam Houston State University as instructor of trumpet, theory and jazz ensembles. He returned to NUSO in 1962 to study with Samuel Adler for his doctorate in composition. Tull returned to Sam Houston State University as Chairman of the Department of Music and was twice named in “Outstanding Educators of America.” In 1970 he achieved national recognition by winning the American Bandmasters Association Ostwald Award for his Toccata for Band, and in 1979 he was awarded the first Arthur Frazer Memorial Prize for his Three Episodes for Orchestra.

Fisher Tull’s Concerto Grosso for Brass Quintet and Symphonic Band was commissioned by Ithaca College in memory of Walter Beeler. The premiere performance was by the Ithaca College Faculty Brass Quintet and the Concert Band conducted by Edward J. Gobrecht, Jr. on April 25, 1980.

The work has its origin in the Baroque concerto for small instrumental ensemble (concertino) set against the lager forces of the orchestra (ripieno). Tull uses the standard brass quintet consisting of two trumpets, horn, trombone, and tuba with full is followed by a fast fugal section, then rounded off with a short recapitulation in triple meter of the opening music. More broadly, the term was used in Baroque Germany for a suite of dance-pieces in French Baroque style preceded by such an ouverture. This genre was extremely popular in Germany during Bach’s day, and he showed far less interest in it than was usual. Scholars believe that Bach did not conceive of the four Orchestral Suites as a set (in the way he conceived of the Brandenburg Concertos), since the sources are various. The source for the Orchestral Suite No. 3, BWV 1068, is a partially autograph set of parts from 1730; Bach wrote out the first violin and continuo parts, C.P.E. Bach wrote out the trumpet, oboe, and timpani parts, and J.S. Bach’s student Johann Ludwig Krebs wrote out the second violin and viola parts. Rifkin has argued that the original was a version for strings and continuo alone.

The Pavane in F-sharp minor, Op. 50, is a pavane by the French composer Gabriel Fauré written in 1887. It was originally a piano piece, but is better known in Fauré’s version for orchestra and optional chorus. Obtaining its rhythm from the slow processional Spanish court dance of the same name, the Pavane ebbs and flows from a series of harmonic and melodic climaxes, conjuring a cool, somewhat haunting, Belle Époque elegance. The piece is scored for only modest orchestral forces consisting of string instruments and one pair each of flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons, and horns.

she received both the Ruth Lorraine Close Musical Fellows and Outstanding Creativity in Composition Awards.

Dr. Reinkemeyer has had performances of her music both nationally and internationally, by the American Composers Orchestra Underwood New Music Readings, North-South Consonance Chamber Orchestra, The Fire Wire Ensemble, Great Noise Ensemble, University of Michigan Symphony Orchestra, Pacific Rim Gamelan, and new music ensembles at BGSU, University of Wisconsin-Whitewater (Sonic!), and Susquehanna University. Her electro-acoustic music has been performed at the SEAMUS Conference, Spark Electronic Music Festival, Electronic Music Midwest Festival, University of Central Missouri Festival, and Threshold Electronic Music Festival. She has enjoyed recent commissions from H. Robert Reynolds and the Detroit Chamber Winds & Strings, Miller Asbill and the Texas Tech University Concert Band, Primary Colors Trio, the Wild Swan Theater, Iowa Music Teachers’ Association, and various performing and visual artists.

Dos Danzas for concert band was commissioned by (and is dedicated to) Miller Asbill and the Texas Tech University Concert Band, who premiered the work on 25 April 2010 at Hemmle Recital Hall, Lubbock, Texas. As if emerging from a fog, the first movement, “Tangential Tango,” is a sultry bitonal dance that utilizes long melodic lines against a pulsing tango rhythm. The two keys are attracted to one another, yet push apart like magnets with the same polarity.

REDLINE TANGO (2004)

John Mackey, born October 1, 1973, in New Philadelphia, Ohio, holds a Master of Music degree from The Juilliard School and a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the Cleveland Institute of Music, where he studied with John Corigliano and Donald Erb, respectively. His works have been performed at the Sydney Opera House, the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, Weill Recital Hall, Jacob’s Pillow Dance Festival, Italy’s Spoleto Festival, Alice Tully Hall, the Joyce Theater, Dance Theater Workshop, and throughout Italy, Chile, Japan, China, Norway, Spain, Colombia, Austria, Brazil, Germany, England, Australia, New Zealand, and the United States.

Mackey has received numerous commissions from the Parsons Dance Company, as well as commissions from the Cleveland Orchestra Youth Orchestra, New York City Ballet’s Choreographic Institute, the Dallas Theater Center, the Alvin Ailey Dance Company, the New York Youth Symphony, Ailey 2, Concert Artists Guild, Peridance Ensemble, and Jeanne Ruddy Dance, among many others. Recent commissions include works for the American Bandmasters Association, the Dallas Wind Symphony, and a concerto for New York Philharmonic Principal Trombonist Joseph Alessi.

Redline Tango takes its title from the common term of “redlining an engine,” or, pushing it to the limit.

The work is in three sections. The first section is the initial virtuosic “redlining” section, with constantly driving 16\(^{th}\)-notes and a gradual increase in intensity. After the peak comes the second section, the “tango,” which is rather light but demented, and even a bit sleazy. The material for the tango is derived directly from the first section of the work. A transition leads us back to an even “redder” version of the first section, with one final bang at the end.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PROGRAM NOTES

The four Orchestral Suites (called ouvertures by their author), BWV 1066–1069 are four suites by Johann Sebastian Bach. The name ouverture refers only in part to the opening movement in the style of the French overture, in which a majestic opening section in relatively slow dotted-note rhythm in duple meter
