ABOUT IDIT

An active performer of both jazz and classical music, Idit Shner has played in various distinguished venues in the United States and abroad, such as The Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. and Lincoln Center in New York. Currently Shner plays with her jazz quartet in Eugene and Portland, Oregon. Her latest project involved nursery rhymes and ancient melodies from the Jewish liturgy performed in a jazz setting. Jazz festival performances include the Diet Coke Woman in Jazz Festival (NY), Bellayre Festival NY, New-Trier Jazz Festival (IL), and the City of Seoul Film Festival (Seoul, Korea). In 2010 she toured Japan and Korea with jazz pianist Jangeun “JB” Bae.

As an avid classical saxophonist Shner has commissioned and recorded new music and performed solo recitals in the US and Israel. Shner has collaborated with Fireworks, Beta Collide and Third Angle new music ensembles, and performed with the Oregon Symphony and the Eugene Symphony. Other appearances include the Northwest Percussion Festival, Electronic Music Midwest, the Oregon Bach Festival, Sunriver Music Festival, and many North American Saxophone Alliance Conventions. During March 2006 she played in Israel as a featured soloist with a symphonic orchestra, and performed contemporary music at the national convention of the Society for Electro Acoustic Music in the US. Her last solo recital in Israel was broadcasted live on Voice of Music, a national public radio station.

Shner holds a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the University of North Texas, and was the recipient of the 2015 Thomas F. Hermann Award for Excellence in Pedagogy at the University of Oregon.

Schism for winds and percussion (2015)  David Biedenbender

David Biedenbender (b. 1984, Waukesha, Wisconsin) is a composer, conductor, performer, educator, and interdisciplinary collaborator. He has written music for the concert stage as well as for dance and multimedia collaborations. His work is often influenced by his diverse musical experiences in rock and jazz bands as an electric bassist, in wind, jazz, and New Orleans-style brass bands as a euphonium, bass trombone, and tuba player, and by his study of Indian Carnatic music. His present creative interests include working with everyone from classically trained musicians to improvisers, acoustic chamber music to large ensembles, and interactive electronic interfaces to live brain data.

He received the Doctor of Musical Arts and Master of Music degrees in composition from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor and the Bachelor of Music degree in composition and theory from Central Michigan University. He has also studied at the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study in Uppsala, Sweden with Anders Hillborg and Steven Stucky, the Aspen Music Festival and School with Syd Hodkinson, and in Mysore, India where he studied South Indian Carnatic music. His primary musical mentors include Stephen Rush, Evan Chambers, Kristin Kuster, Michael Daugherty, José Luis-Maurtúa, John Williamson, and Mark Cox.

The composer writes:
Schism is about divisions. I wrote Schism in 2010 in the midst of the turbulent national mid-term elections, a time that, in the context of more recent political turmoil, actually seems quite tame. I was overwhelmingly frustrated by the sophomoric mud-slinging and ridiculous lies being told by many politicians and the variously allied media, but I was also somewhat amused by what was nothing short of a nationwide goat rodeo. Much of the musical material is transcribed almost note for note from an improvisation I played on the piano and recorded in the early stages of sketching the piece. I remember being interested in combining the pointillism of Anton Webern’s music with a bluesy rock groove, so much of the piece is based on a single, simple, eighth note based, divided melodic line that jumps around the piano in very large leaps. I think of the musical affect as similar to the compound melodies in J.S. Bach’s Unaccompanied Cello Suites, where a single melodic line is perceptually transformed through large leaps into multiple voices, though, in the end, I used the ensemble to actually hold out the notes the piano could not to add color, character, and attitude to the independent voices. I also wanted to play with the notion of groove by dividing it in unusual and unexpected ways, almost like running a few of the licks and grooves through a meat grinder.

Schism was originally written for the chamber orchestra Alarm Will Sound. This version for winds and percussion was commissioned by a consortium of ensembles led by Robert Carnochan and the University of Texas at Austin Wind Symphony as well as Michael Haithcock, University of Michigan; Chris Knighten, University of Arkansas; Steven D. Davis, University of Missouri–Kansas City Conservatory of Music.

From a Dark Millennium (1982)
Joseph Schwantner

Born in Chicago in 1943, Joseph Schwantner received his musical and academic training at the Chicago Conservatory and Northwestern University. While developing a role as a leading American composer, he also served on the faculties of the Juilliard School, the Eastman School of Music, and the Yale School of Music, simultaneously establishing himself as a sought-after composition instructor.

Schwantner’s compositional career has been marked by many accolades, including the Bearns Prize, a Guggenheim Fellowship, several Grammy nominations, and the 1979 Pulitzer Prize for his orchestral work Aftertones of Infinity. Among his many commissions is his Percussion Concerto, which was commissioned for the 150th anniversary season of the New York Philharmonic and is one of the most performed concert works of the past decade. Schwantner is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.
meticulous ear,” he first came to international attention in the early 1990s with a series of witty and brilliantly scored compositions inspired by 20th-century pop culture phenomena and personalities. His idiom bears the stamps of classic modernism, with colliding tonalities and blocks of sound. At the same time, his melodies are infectious, and the rhythmic structures are driving and energetic.

Born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Daugherty is the son of a dance-band drummer and the oldest of five brothers, all professional musicians. He studied composition at the University of North Texas, at the Manhattan School of Music, and at IRCAM in Paris with Pierre Boulez. He received his DMA in composition from Yale University in 1986, joined the faculty at University of Michigan in 1991.

The composer offers the following insight to his composition:

Lost Vegas (2011) was commissioned by the University of Michigan Symphony Band, Michael Haithcock, conductor, and the University of Miami Wind Ensemble, Gary Green, conductor. Lost Vegas is my musical homage to bygone days in the city of Las Vegas, Nevada. I recall the enormous neon signs punctuating the “Strip”, promoting casinos and hotels ruled by the underworld, and the massive marquees trumpeting performances by pop music legends such as Frank Sinatra and Elvis. Performed without pause, Lost Vegas is divided into three movements.

The first movement, Viva, is inspired by the seminal book Learning from Las Vegas (1968–72), by modernist architects Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown, who likened the symbolism of the Vegas “Strip” to the Piazza Navona in Rome. The music in Viva unfolds as catchy musical riffs are layered and phased in various polytonal guises and orchestrations.

Mirage, the second movement, was inspired by my recent drive through the forbidding desert of Death Valley. Located 88 miles west of Las Vegas, Death Valley is one the lowest, driest, and hottest locations in North America. A serpentine oboe solo, later doubled by trumpets with harmon mutes, is surrounded by steamy...

From a Dark Millennium was commissioned by the Mid-American Conference Band Directors Association in 1980 and premiered by Northern Illinois University in 1981. The work marks the only time that Schwantner has used the same music for two different pieces. The other piece, Music for Amber (1981), is a chamber work whose second movement, “Sanctuary”, provided the musical material for From a Dark Millennium. The movement itself was inspired by a poem written by the composer.

Sanctuary....
    deep forests,
    a play of shadows.
    Most ancient murmurings
    from a dark millennium,
    the trembling fragrance
    of the music of amber....

Concerto for soprano saxophone and band (2015) William Bolcom

Professor Emeritus William Bolcom, recipient of the 1988 Pulitzer Prize for Music, maintains an active schedule of performing and composing in spite of his recent retirement from the University of Michigan. As a piano soloist, composer, and accompanist (primarily with his wife, mezzo-soprano and former University of Michigan School of Music, Theatre and Dance faculty member Joan Morris), Bolcom is represented on recordings for Nonesuch, Deutsche Gramophone, RCA, CBS, MHS, Arabesque, Jazzology, Vox, Advance, CRI, Phillips, Laurel, First Edition, Newport Classics, Omega, Vanguard, Argo, Koch Classics, Crystal, New World, Centaur, Folkways, Naxos, and many others. As a writer, his articles essays and editions are widely published.

Bolcom previously taught at the University of Washington, the Queens and Brooklyn Colleges of the City University of New York, and New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts. He joined the UM faculty in 1973, and was honored in 1977 with the Henry Russel Award and the Henry Russel Lectureship in 1997. He was appointed Ross Lee Finney Distinguished Professor of Composition in 1994, and chaired the Composition Department from 1998 to 2003. Bolcom writes the following about the work:

The soprano saxophone had far fewer proponents in jazz’s classical era than either the alto or tenor, and the only name that comes to mind quickly is Sidney Bechet. This has changed a great deal in the last few decades, and it helps that newer saxophones are considered better in tune and general construction than the old ones. I’ve also found the soprano saxophone to be sensitive and expressive enough to play for instance my Aubade, which was written for the oboe. It can cross the divide between classical and other music easily when asked.

I felt this concerto to be in a celebratory mood, as I feel I’m beginning to understand the band in a way I didn’t when only writing for orchestra. In the last years I’ve been exploring the possibilities inherent in the band and can say with certainty that this whole concerto would have been far different had it been first conceived for orchestra, as were my Saxophone Concerto Grosso and Clarinet Concerto before their band versions appeared.

In an orchestral milieu, even with its growing credibility in the classical world, a soprano saxophone might feel a little like an ugly duckling (which after all will present itself at the end as a swan) as soloist; the meeting might thus be somewhat confrontational and dramatic in dialogue with the orchestra, opening its own wealth of musical possibilities. In the band the soprano saxophone is totally at home and can converse with colleagues like the friendly discourse between piano and orchestra as in a Mozart concerto, and this pushes the dialogue into a more collegial direction and a very different mood. Though I can conceive that a later orchestral version could be fine, I wanted this concerto to feel right now totally like a band piece.

There are three movements in this Concerto. Lively, with humor contrasts the opening material featuring the high register of the saxophone with a more bluesy second theme in the lower part. Serenade follows with a sort of South Seas rhythm-and-blues atmosphere. Charade tosses itself between a jazz-type “head” with what customarily follows versus a 1960s early-rockstyle hymn with 1930s echoes. These two things together grow into an apotheosis, ending the concerto.

Here We Rest (2011) Anthony Barfield

Anthony Barfield is a composer and educator based in New York City. Known for a lyrical writing style, his compositions have been performed throughout the U.S. and Europe. Anthony has received commissions from groups such as The University of Kentucky Wind Ensemble and Joseph Alessi of the New York Philharmonic. He made his Carnegie Hall debut at the 2012 New York Wind Band Festival where his work “Here We Rest” was performed. In demand as a composer in residence, Mr. Barfield has had performances at College Bandmasters National Association and has worked with groups such as The University of Scranton Singers and the Manhattan School of Music Brass Ensemble. Anthony released his first composition album in the fall of 2013 titled “Chapter II” with The University of Alabama Wind Ensemble. Anthony studied composition with C.P. First, Avner Dorman, Thomas Cabaniss, and Nils Vigeland. His primary trombone instructors include Joseph Alessi, Dr. Per Brevig, Jay Evans and Dan Drill. He holds degrees in trombone performance from the Juilliard School and Manhattan School of Music. Mr. Barfield currently resides in New York City with his fiancé and works for Juilliard Global Ventures.

Here We Rest is dedicated to the state of Alabama in tribute to the victims of the 2011 tornado and those who were affected by it. Originally written for trombone choir, this arrangement captures the true essence of pain of people’s losses.

Lost Vegas (2011) Michael Daugherty

Michael Daugherty is one of the most colorful and widely performed American composers on the concert music scene today. Hailed by critics as “a monster icon maker” whose music reveals a “maverick imagination, with a fearless structural sense and
