Course Description: Processes underlying social perception and social interaction. Topics include aggression, the self-concept, stereotyping and prejudice, conformity, persuasion, attraction, and helping.

Social psychology is the scientific study of the way in which people's thoughts, feelings, and behaviors are influenced by the social context—real or imagined. Social psychology seeks to understand individuals' subjective experiences and the way those experiences impact our behavior. Social psychology creates new knowledge by applying experimental methods to human thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. One of the greatest things about studying social psychology is that it is relevant – it pertains to things you are probably already thinking about in your daily life. After this course you should be able to answer questions such as “Why did so many people like the Gangnam Style dance?” and “Why do women tend to underperform in comparison to men in math and science?” and “What are sources of intolerance and how can we decrease it?” and “Do opposites really attract?” and others like them. Be prepared to challenge some of your long-held assumptions about human behavior. Be prepared to think. Be prepared to apply the ideas and methods you learn in this course to what you've learned in other courses and to your everyday experiences.

Research about learning has shown that students learn and retain material better in a situation in which learning is active rather than passive, and cooperative rather than individual. I have incorporated some of the principles of active and cooperative learning into my class, and try to be sensitive to the various types of learning styles that might exist among my students. To this end, we will do active learning exercises in this class that involve your participation. We will also do some group work. Oftentimes these in-class active learning and group exercises will have associated class credit. You must be in class to receive this credit.

Course Objectives: Social psychology is the scientific study of the ways in which people's thoughts, feelings, and behaviors are influenced by their social environment. The aims of this course are to familiarize you with the concepts, theories, and methods of social psychology and to help you recognize the influence of the environment on behavior, thoughts, and feelings.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

- * Learn about important theories and research findings in social psychology
- * Learn about how social psychology uses science to create new knowledge
- * Become a more thoughtful consumer of research in your daily life

- * Develop your skills as a critical thinker about all topics, not just psychology
- * Understand the roots and consequences of collective identities, including stereotyping, intolerance, and conflict
- * Learn about psychological perspectives on the nature and role of the self, group processes and intergroup relations, individual and collective identity, emotion/motivation, and attraction and close relationships.

Estimated Student Workload: When you complete this course, you will earn 4 credits toward your degree. Four credits is the equivalent of 120 hours of work across the term, or 12 hours per week for 10 weeks. You will spend 3 hours per week watching lecture videos. The other 9 hours will be spent reading, writing your paper, watching additional videos, participating on the discussion forums, and preparing for exams. Readings will comprise the majority of your work outside of class (4-5 hours per week). You will complete a short paper and provide feedback to another student on their paper (15 hours). You will be required to watch videos online outside of class and complete short questionnaires (5 hours total). Finally, you will be required to complete weekly quizzes (4 hours). The remaining time will be spent reviewing previous lessons and preparing for exams. The workload will be less at the beginning of the term, increasing as you prepare for exams and complete your papers.

Required Readings: Weekly readings from the textbook will be required for all students.

Text: Aronson, E., Wilson, T. D., & Akert, R. M. Social Psychology (9th Edition) Prentice Hall. (Available at the Duck Store as well as a copy on reserve at Knight Library).

Supplementary Readings: Additional readings drawn from psychological journals will also be required for each section and will be posted on Canvas.

Course Requirements: Your grade for this class will be based on 5 things:

1. Exams: There will be a midterm exam and a final exam. The exams will include questions taken from the text, lecture, and the supplemental readings. There is no way to cover all of the information contained in the textbook during lecture, so doing well on the exams will require that you learn from the textbook, supplemental readings, and the lecture. The exams will require that you be able to apply the general principles from class to novel specific examples. Exams will be multiple choice. The final exam will NOT be cumulative.

You will need to schedule a time at your testing location (at SSIL: email: de@ssil or website: <https://distanceeducation.uoregon.edu/> if testing at the UO or with your proctor if testing off campus). There are instructions for setting up exams locally or distant in the document "Exam Procedures". The midterm can be taken during weeks 4 and 5 and the final exam will be available during weeks 7 and 8. Be sure to schedule this time well in advance, contacting me the week of the exam that you can't find a time will not be acceptable. These two weeks are the only time it is offered; there is no make-up time for the midterm.

2. Paper: You will have one paper due during the term. You will select one topic within Social Psychology and write a review of it. You will be required to include at least 3 peer-reviewed journal articles discussing the topic. A list of topics is provided on Blackboard, however if you would like to write about something not on the list please discuss it with Jordan either during office hours or via email. If you would like assistance finding journal articles on your topic please contact Jordan or the GTF. In your paper, summarize the history of the topic, current research, and application of the research.

You will each submit a draft which will then be reviewed by another student and returned to you for editing. More details on the papers will be made available online.

3. Out of Class Activities: You will be required to watch videos and complete short questionnaires about those videos outside of class. These activities will require you to synthesize course material and apply it to case examples from the real world.

4. Quizzes: You are required to read the chapter and supplemental reading for each section which will be tested with a weekly quiz available on Canvas. The quizzes will be made available by Monday of the week and will be due by that Sunday evening. The tests will be about 10-15 questions and will be timed (1.5 minutes per question). Two weeks (week 1 and 6 will have multiple quizzes).

5. Discussion Forum: Each week (starting week 2) a set of questions will be posted by the Instructor or Teaching Assistant on Monday mornings. Each student is responsible for answering ONE of these questions per week. Additionally, you will be required to make ONE substantive response to your fellow students' posts or replies from the Instructor or Teaching. The initial response to the question is due each week by Thursday and the one substantive replies are due by Sunday. Additional information on the discussion forum will be available on Canvas.

Grading: Your final grade in the course is based on your total points accumulated on the two tests, quizzes, and in-class assignments, as described above. To summarize:

Exams (100 points each)	= 200 points
Short paper (80 points for final draft 20 for first draft and review)	= 100 points
Out of Class Activities	= 50 points
Quizzes (10)	= 100 points
Discussion Forum	= 50 points
Total	= 500 points
