UO Women in Graduate Science Workshop Series Presents: Mental Health in Graduate School Workshop

with the University Counseling & Testing Center

This workshop will discuss normalizing mental health, available resources, reasons graduate students commonly seek out support from the counseling center, and more.

Two psychology doctoral interns from the UO Counseling & Testing Center will lead an interactive presentation focusing on topics of mental health that commonly affect graduate students. They will also discuss resources available on and off campus as well as answer questions. After a short break, there will be a graduate student Q & A panel who will discuss their experiences and answer questions. *Students of all genders and academic disciplines welcome.

*This is intended to be an inclusive & supportive environment for all mental health concerns and identities.
