ABOUT TONIGHT'S GUEST ARTIST

Nate Wooley (b. 1974) grew up in a Finnish–American fishing village in Oregon. He has spent the rest of his life trying musically to find a way back to the peace and quiet of that time by whole-heartedly embracing the space between complete absorption in sound and relative absence of the same. He began playing trumpet professionally at age thirteen with his father, and after studying he moved to Colorado where he studied more with Ron Miles, Art Lande, Fred Hess, and improvisation master Jack Wright. Wooley's tenure with Wright began to break him out of self-imposed molds and into the sound world that he has embraced as his own. Wooley currently resides in Jersey City, NJ and performs solo trumpet improvisations as well as with his trio 'Blue Collar' with Steve Swell and Tatsuya Nakatani. He has also performed regularly with Anthony Braxton, Bhub Rainey, Alessandro Bosetti, Fritz Welch, Herb Robertson, Kevin Norton, Tony Malaby, Randy Peterson, Scott Rosenberg, Matt Moran, Chris Speed, Andrew D'Angelo, Tim Barnes, Okkyung Lee, Assif Tsahar, and other improvisation luminaries.
