

UO Creative Writing Program
and Robert D. Clark Honors College present

2011-12 Reading Series

Jason Brown grew up in Maine and received his MFA from Cornell University. He was a Stegner Fellow and Truman Capote Fellow at Stanford, where he taught as a Jones Lecturer. He has also taught in the MFA Program at the University of Arizona. He is the author of two collections of short stories, Driving the Heart and Other Stories (Norton, 1999) and Why the Devil Chose New England For His Work (Grove/Open City, 2007). His stories have appeared in Best American Short Stories, Harpers, The Atlantic, and NPR's Selected Shorts.

The UO Creative Writing Program is pleased to welcome Jason Brown not only as a guest in its annual Reading Series, but also as the newest member of its faculty.
