

Class Assignments & The Project Preliminary Proposal:

Back

There are 6 assignments for the quarter plus your project bound Preliminary Proposal.

The Proposal is due on Monday Nov. 3 @5:00pm (Mid-term) and Tuesday, Dec.9,1997 @ 1:00pm (Final).
(Put it in the alcove across from 216 La.)

Proposal Requirements:

Mid-term: Bound Report: 10 pages + illustrations, diagrams etc.

The object at this point is to have developed a project narrative which includes materials you have developed in class exercises but rewritten and expanded as appropriate. You need not turn in the class assignments again. Use them instead and continue to improve their quality and completeness. Add the other materials you think your project narrative (maps, diagrams, processes...)needs whether it has been requested or not.

Turn in a list of your project resources, rather than boxes of the materials you are collecting. Obviously this mid-term target is an attempt to get you to concentrate on your projects early in the term. I'll provide a written critique of each well-developed submission.

Final: Bound, 20 pages + illustrations etc. + schematic design + project schedule (bar chart) + list of resources & bibliography.

Assignments: The assignments are intended to be a series of one week long exercises to help you develop an important aspect of your project. No.1, for example, is really just a first hop toward the development of a better developed project narrative. The more you try to write out (+draw and diagram out) what you are interested in accomplishing, the better you'll understand it yourself and and the faster it will grow as a project.

Turn in your assignment at the end of the class on the day it is due. Be prepared to talk about your work in class. A page or two is the intent, but more is OK if its useful to your work.
