Percent of Students Subjected to Rape

- Many researchers aggregate the prevalence of both attempted and completed rape in their calculations.
- One reason for this is likely that neither campus safety nor policy success can be based on whether a particular student is successful at resisting a rape attempt.
- In the data presented on 30 September 2014, for events related to “rape,” we used two items from the SES pertaining to penetration of the vagina or anus.
- In this October 2 update, we calculated the percentage of students who have been subjected to rape attempts and/or completed rapes during their time in college – using four items from the modified SES, Koss, et al, (2007).
- In this new calculation we found that 19% of the women in our sample experienced rape during college up to this point in their studies.
- The survey items and percentages by year and gender follow this slide.
